Support Allergic Friends Everywhere

Show your support by taking food allergies seriously

Allergy is a community health concern. The most severe allergic reaction is called anaphylaxis and can be life - threatening.

Allergies are on the increase worldwide. Schools and preschools have an increased number of children with food allergies in their care. Adults with food allergy are finding it difficult to eat out safely.

We all need to eat, but those with severe food allergies have to be extremely careful to check ingredients each time they eat. It takes less than one bite to cause an allergic reaction.

Even the most extreme form of allergy (anaphylaxis) is manageable with correct and reliable information and education.

1 – 2% of adults and 6% of children in Australia suffer with severe food allergies.

This impacts their whole family, friends and all who care for them.

9 foods cause 90% of food induced allergic reactions

- egg
- milk
- peanut
- fish (fin fish)
- soy
- sesame
- tree nuts (cashew, almond, pistachio etc)
- crustacea (prawns, crab, lobster etc)
- Wheat
